IMPRESSIVE SERVICES.

Last Official Tribute to the Memory of Samuel Freeman Miller, Late Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court - An Impressive Scene in the Chamber of Justice-Departure of the Funeral Party En Route for the Final Resting Place in Iowa.

Washington, Oct. 17 .- In the chamber where Henry Clay made the speeches that made him famous as a statesman and an orator, all that was mortal of Clay's devoted follower and disciple. Justice Samuel F. Miller, reposed yesterday, while relatives, friends, official associates and many persons of distinction paid a last tribute to his memory. The court room, always somber and formal in its appearance, was even more impressive while the services lasted by reason of their peculiar solemnity. The nine high backed chairs which the members of the highest judicial tribunal in the Nation occupy on court days, were ampty. The one immediately to the right of the central chair was heavily draped in black. Several floral pieces were banked against the desks of the justices. There were no other decorations. The central floral piece represented an open book and on one of its leaves immortelles formed the words: "With malice towards none," and on the other, "with charity towards all." This tribute was from the ladies of the Garfield Hospital board of managers. President Harrison sent two crossed swords of white flowers encircled by a wreath of roses and orchids. A sheaf of wheat was Secretary Noble's offering. Mrs. Harrison sent an anchor, and Mrs. Hancock, Senator Edmunds, Mrs. Fuller and the pupils of the National Law University sent other floral devices. At the residence were present the members of the family with a number of friends assembled at two o'clock. No ceremony was held there, and the funeral cortege started for the Capitol without delay.

> A Plan for Wholesale Assassination. NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 17 .- To-night the police searched the residence of one of the men arrested for the murder of State officers who acted counter to the wishes of the Mafia, an Italian secret society formed for the purpose of assassination. This society includes a large portion of the lower class of Italians. Heretofore they have generally confined their assassinations to their own nationality, and this is one of the few instances of their applying their methods to one not of their own people. THE SYRACUSE FIRE.

Large crowds of people gathered in West Fayette street and gazed upon the smoking ruins. Only a few fragments of the outer walls remain standing, but the brick elevator shaft towers up from the wreck six stories high, a toppling monument over where every body had come to believe at least two victims of the fire lay The Leland Hotel clerks reported yesterday afternoon that every body had been accounted for and that Mary Doyle had not been at the hotel. Mary Padden, the laundry girl, was reported as killed by jumping. When the confusion of the records had become somewhat righted, it was found that both women were in the house and that neither had since been heard from. Their people live in this city and are anxiously inquiring for them. If these two girls are in the ruins, the total number of killed is six. Miss Padden and Maria Sullivan both worked in the laundry and roomed together in Room 218, on the fifth floor, back. They were awakened by the fire in their room and both dashed out into the hall. That is the last known of Mary Padden. Miss Sullivan escaped uninjured. It is supposed that Miss Padden sank helpless in the smoke and that her body now lies in the ruins. Mary Doyle, who is the other person reported missing, was a sister of Maggie Doyle, who was badly injured by jumping and by burning. The housekeeper says that she was certainly in the hotel and nothing has been heard from her since. Yesterday morning, for the first time since the fire, the six girls from New York who were employed at the Leland, but who escaped, are able to clothe themselves sufficiently to appear in public. They have been occupying a room at Congress Hall and all their meals have been sent up to them. They have been clothed by a relief com-
